

Creating new ways of cooperation at national and international level on data protection

Создание новых путей сотрудничества

A Progress Report from the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO), United Kingdom.

Moscow, 10 November 2015

Hannah McCausland
Senior International Policy Officer, ICO

Why cooperate?

- More efficient – less duplication
- Cumulative weight together
- Cross-cutting results with respective expertise
- Learning - knowledge and experience
- Lack of resources – many face budget cuts

Why cooperate?

External message

cooperating authorities are committed to a global response to global privacy threats

How to cooperate?

- Importance of regular communication
- Ideally via variety of means
- Permanent named points of contact
- The importance of networks

The importance of networks

- Examples: linguistic, regional, historical

Current means of outreach in networks

- Teleconferences
- Common events
- Online shared spaces to share expertise (but not entire cases -respecting legal restrictions on transferring personal data)
- Email groups
- Training /secondments - new

Networks – a case study from GPEN

- Began in 2010 with 11 authorities – now +60
- Canada OPC manages; took over from OECD
- Discussion forum – primary contacts
- Authority pages
- Member contact list
- GPEN Sweep – high awareness-raising
- New projects – Network of Networks, Training/secondments

Networks need to work better together!

Case study - INSECAM

- Joint letter (+5 authorities from different global regions) to website operator
- Outreach to Roskomnadzor
- Sharing information – confirmation that website operator had ceased activity
